THE PREPARATION OF GRAIN FOR SEEDING

Experimental Farms Note

In preparing grain for seeding purposes a good fanning mill is practically necessary. The proper adjustment of this machine to do the work demands care and good judgment as regards the choice and arrangement of sieves for the kind of grain to be cleaned. The size of the sieve will depend on the size of the grains to be cleaned and also on the make of the fanning mill used. However, if any difficulty is experienced in getting the right adjustment the maker of the mill will help select the right size of sieve, if he is furnished with a one pound sample of the grain in question.

In cleaning grain it is desirable to use a top sieve with perforations just big enough to allow the kernels to pass through. The straw, chaff and other coarse material and seeds not wanted will be carried over the top and delivered separately. The air blast should be heavy enough to blow dirt, light kernels and many of the weed seeds clear of the good grain. The lower sieve should be smaller than the top sieve and allow weed seeds and broken kernels to pass through. The feed should be heavy enough to keep the top sieve thinly covered. This will tend to carry the rough material over the end. It is usually necessary to pass the seed grain through the mill at least twice before a thoroughly satisfactory sample is obtained.

If oats and barley are present in large quantities when cleaning wheat, it will pay to let a fairly heavy flow cover the top sieve, even to the point of allowing some of the wheat to pass over in order to insure the removal of the greatest amount of oats and barley.

When the grain on the home farm is not suitable for seeding, seed should be purchased from a thoroughly reliable source and preferably registered material of a variety proven suitable to the district.

It is not economical to sow poorly graded seed, or seed containing weed seeds. Weeds in a crop entail a direct loss as they take up space, moisture and plant food. They also add to the cost of harvesting, threshing and handling—J. G. C. Fraser, Cerealist Central Experimental Farm.

VALUE OF TOURIST TRAFFIC

According to an estimate made by the Dominion Parks Board, tourist traffic to the mountain resorts of Alberta last year had had a total value of $20,000,000 to the province.

NEW BRANCH LINES

New branch railway lines in Alberta are provided for in the National Railways Bill presented to the House of Commons at Ottawa. These include 185 miles of new construction in the province at a cost of $4,992,000.

After everybody has been well educated there will be no one left to do the work. *

A little boy was given half a dollar by his uncle. He had heard that a certain make of car is very cheap, and he wrote to the factory for one. They were so amused that they asked him to visit them. His aunt took him to the factory.

"Go round," said the manager, having taken the half-dollar, and choose the car you like the best."

He headed round, looking at the various specimens.

"Well?" said the manager, after he had made a thorough inspection.

"Please, I'd like my half-dollar back," said the boy.

KIDDIES' MENU ON NATIONAL TRAINS

DINING CAR MENU FOR THE LITTLE FOLK

WHEN little Folk are travelling go about a dining car—
The Line whose printed menus tell
What hungry girls and boys love well,
AND THAT'S THE C.N.R. I

THIS is not a page out of any ordinary nursery rhyme book, but is the front and back cover of the Canadian National Railway's new menu for children which is now in use on all dining cars on the system. No more need the mother travelling with little ones dread the order of having to choose the meals for the children, with two pages of combination menus for breakfast, dinner and tea made up of the most nutritious and appetizing foods obtainable at prices which are in accord with the size of the meals patrons who enjoy the meals.

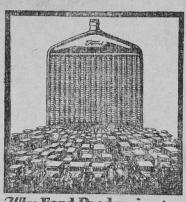

The Canadian National is one of the first railroads to cater in this way to the young travelling public and future each visit to the dining car will be looked forward to by the little folk with great pleasure if only for the opportunity of seeing again the "little picture book" from which they may choose what they will have to eat. Each page of the menu gives pictures and funny little verses combine to make a most delightful story to pass the time while the waiter is getting the order.

So attractive is the menu for children that it is much enjoyed by children since its introduction on the National trains, that numerous appreciations have come into the office of the superintendent of dining cars. Many other railroads will take note of it as being a service, not only to the parents, but to many children who will be taken along on the "very next trip we make, because travelling with kiddies is certainly no hardship now and it is a shame to deprive them of all the fun they could get out of their own personal dining car service such as this," to put it in the words of one father and mother who travelled west the "National Way" just a few days ago.

In an endeavor to make the dining car service the greatest possible benefit to the travelling public, Mr. Pratt has recently inaugurated a lunch counter service in Colonist cars between Winnipeg and Toronto. These are on trial at present, and it is hoped with the approval of the public will be placed on all transcontinental trains in the service. Judging from the patronage of the first lunch counter Colonist car sent out, the convenience is much appreciated.

70% Ford Predominates

Many Reasons From Many Users

If you were to ask the next fifty Ford owners you meet why they prefer Ford, you would get a wide variety of answers.

Some would say, "Because they seem never to wear out;" others would answer, "Because they cost so little." Many would reply "Because I can get service anywhere;" and just as many, "Because it is the only car I can afford to own."

All would tell you, "Because they master a bad road in any weather," a woman driver would respond, "Because I can drive it so easily." From the fleet-owners you would hear, "Because I can buy two or three or four Ford Trucks for the price of one big truck."

Wherever you might inquire you would hear expressed these basic reasons why Ford predominates—why, year after year, Ford sales equal the total sales of all other cars combined.

REGISTERED COCKERELS

(Experimental Farm Note)

Canada is setting the pace for the whole world to follow in the system adopted to obtain registered cockerels.

The bred-to-lay cockerel that can transmit to his pullets the ability to produce a large number of eggs is what all keepers of poultry are after. It is recognized that the quickest way to increase the average egg yield of any flock is through the male, and this fact is commercialized by many breeders of so called bred-to-lay stock, who advertise high producing males that have not the breeding behind them, and are therefore unable to transmit this quality to their offspring.

Because of this fact dishonest breeders have foisted overrated stock upon the public, and one of the reasons why registered cockerels are wanted is to overcome his practice of selling inferior birds as good breeding stock.

At the present time it is possible for honest breeders to enter their pullets in the Laying Contests (of which there are 12 throughout the Dominion) and by having their birds qualify to produce cockerels that may be registered by the Canadian National Records.

The fact that a cockerel is registered is a guarantee to the public that he has a certified pedigree behind him, of at least two generations of 200 (or more) egg blood, and that he is himself a bird typical of the breed and without standard disqualifications. Such a bird grown in our Canadian climate means the very best procurable in breeding for high egg production.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Local business in all lines of enterprise is very slow. This is owing to a number of immediate causes and to some that originated in years past. But though we describe business as being slow we tenaciously hold the opinion that it is far sounder condition than it was a year ago; though at that time money was moving more freely.

The immediate causes of the present sluggishness in business include such factors as the recent car shortage, the slower returns for the wheat under the pool system, and the difficulty of hauling over bad trails; and most important of all causes, the deterioragations which our assets could not meet.

The condition then prevailing had the inevitable result of utterly destroying our credit at a time when we could not obtain any additional credit in the form of long or short term loans, and this is the condition in which we still remain.

It is under these strenuous conditions that we have, for the past three years been making progress in a new and safer manner. The first year in this period we hardly met the interest charges on our indebtedness. During the following year, for the first time in the history of this district, no addition was made to the liability column, and generally interest charges were met with a reduction of nearly ten per cent of the outstanding liabilities.

The crop year now approaching it's close is the second in which there has been no material increase in general liabilities and interest charges have been met with an increased percentage of obligations cleared up.

During this period we have been slowly emerging from bad to better through the healthy and sound (though somewhat painful) period of liquidation of assets.

To those who entertain the idea that this district has suffered more severely than most in the west, we should say that while perhaps the curtailment of credit may have occurred here before it did in some districts, it is well that it did so. For having started the sooner to pass through the experience which all districts share, we have the opportunity of emerging the sooner. It is somewhat of a pity that our reckless course had not been arrested sooner than it was, for then we should not have been in so deep.

However, there are not lacking many indications that the tide of fortune has already ceased to ebb and that from now on we may expect a slow flow in the right direction. We say slow for a number of reasons we have not space to set forth now. And we add that it is well that this tide should flow up slowly, otherwise we may be again flooded with rising prosperity which like the two previous upward flows leave us the worse off at the ebbing of the tide.

Our prediction is that it will take a further period of three years for the flood tide of prosperity to reach its height so far as this district is concerned.

During this period there is not the slightest reason for us to lose our courage. We need to preserve our optimism well tempered with the qualities of tenacity and endurance with steadily increasing better methods of accomplishing our business.

BROS U. F. A.

There will be a business meeting followed by a social, Friday April 11th.

ALL the 'old times' in and about 'The Pas', Manitoba, are 'set up' over the chances of their favorites in the annual dog derby classic, which takes place to-morrow, March 28. They're talking dogs and dog teams until they are almost black in the face and they have compared times as their favorites tried out the courses in various districts.

And second in importance to the winner of the 200-mile grind, is the winner of the Carnival Queen contest for which many Manitoba

Photograph shows three of the strong contenders for this year's honors. From left to right, that is G. B. always been accustomed, and Coddy felt the coldness of the manner with which she was appraising him.

"Do you feel that you can ride back?" he asked, anxiously wishing to bridge the awkwardness of the moment; but before Helen had a chance to answer him another rider came up.

"I'm all right, Jeff," said Helen to the newcomer. He—Mr—

"I'm Carter Newland," offered Coddy.

The two stared at him for a moment and the young man whom Helen had called "Jeff" stepped up to Coddy and faced him angrily. "You're a liar," he said. "You're nothing but a mountain dog!"

Coddy forgot everything. The Colonel's careful teaching dropped from him in an instant and his gentlemanly bearing lost itself in the temper of the moment. He flung Jeff to the ground and tore into him with crazed fury. Coddy knew only one way of dealing with an insult, and he was delivering it with a certainty that boded no good for Jeff. Helen drew back and screamed at them to stop, but her voice might have been the wind for all they paid attention to it. But presently, when a calm even voice spoke, Coddy stopped his pouncing and looked up into Colonel Newland's face.

"I think he has had sufficient, Carter," said the Colonel.

Coddy ashamed and humiliated and rose and walked away.

"This will teach you to hold your tongue before a gentleman," the Colonel said. Coddy turned, believing that he had been addressed but he saw that the Colonel was speaking to the other man.

The affair of the afternoon troubled him. He had disgraced himself before his friend, and he did not know how to redeem himself. He would like to have asked advice of Helen, but she had turned from him to Jeff, and he knew that she would not help him. A little later he met her as she was leaving the Colonel's house, and he felt at least he could make an apology to her.

"I'm sorry," he said, "that I—acted the way I did this afternoon. I forgot about the exceptions, reservations and conditions in the original grant there—of from the Crown and in the existing Certificate of Title."

So it was Jeff Newland whom he had fought. And the Colonel wanted revenge on his own son. That was why he adopted Coddy. When the boy came down the steps a little later he wore the same clothes that he had worn on that day when he met the Colonel, and they were hardly becoming to him. He slipped out the door at the rear of the house and when he came to the lighted entrance of the Colonel's study he stopped. The Colonel was talking to his son and his voice and manner reassuring Coddy that the step he was taking was the right one. Colonel Newland might love him, but the poignancy of the sorrow he felt for his own son would never be lessened by that love.

Popular Traffic Appointments

D. R. Kennedy of Buffalo, as General Agent at Montreal; J. E. Parker, General Agent Steamship Traffic, Montreal to Toronto in the same capacity; and H. R. Mathewson to Buffalo, as General Agent, from the office of Assistant General Agent at Chicago.

Important changes in transportation circles just announced at the headquarters of the Canadian Pacific Railway affect six traffic men well known throughout Canada, the United States and abroad at Montreal, Toronto, Buffalo and in the Orient.

E. F. L. Sturdee, general agent of the Canadian Pacific at Seattle has already left to take the post of Acting General Manager Agent in the Orient. In recent changes, Mr. Sturdee stands senior to the service of the Company which he joined as junior clerk in 1893 at St. John, N.B. During his thirty-one years of service he has made many friends all over the North American home.

H. B. Beaumont, who held important posts in the European service of the Company, and has had the distinction of being manager of Ocean Liner traffic in Toronto, is appointed to the Montreal office as Assistant General Passenger Agent, Steamships. Mr. Beaumont was for many years connected with the Allan Line which company was taken over by the Canadian Pacific.

Other important appointments are those of D. R. Kennedy of Buffalo as General Agent at Montreal; J. E. Parker, General Agent, Steamship traffic, Montreal to Toronto in the same capacity; and H. R. Mathewson to Buffalo as General Agent, from the office of Assistant General Agent at Chicago.

Coddy crept to the entrance of the house and hid himself in the shadow on the running board of Jeff's car. A few moments later, announcing his presence by a bang of the heavy front door Jeff stepped into his car and Coddy appeared suddenly from the darkness. As Coddy struck him, Jeff crumpled and fell back into the seat. An instant and Coddy slipped a gag over his mouth and bound his hands together. The mountain boy's face was white but grim as he took the wheel and drove away.

Coddy Jakes picked himself up from the dust, brushed himself off and stopped to pick up a hat lying half hidden in the road. He handed it to the man who, like himself, had just struggled to his feet. Then he smiled and turned back toward the cabin. The other man followed silently and silently.

Coddy turned to him presently and smiled again. "You're getting harder to lick every day, Jeff," he said. "In a few more months—"

"How long are you going to keep me here, living like a dog?" growled Jeff.

Coddy looked off toward the canyon that lead into the world from which he had thought it best to take himself and the young man who walked with him. "Quite a spell," he answered dreamily. "Quite a spell."

Jeff Newland glared and kicked the dust. He would like to have throttled this boy, who made him obey like a child, but his ineffectual attempts had left him no choice. He was powerless to do anything or go anywhere so long as Coddy Jakes wished otherwise.

He turned angrily toward him. "Some day I'm going to tickle you."

Coddy smiled in his slow gentle quiet manner and answered him. "On that day I will have something to tell you," he said.

Behind them a commotion arose, whose menacing proportions grew with the sound of approaching horses and the boys turned quickly about. Coddy recognized the sheriff, and his mind swept back to the shot that had been

SCARS OF JEALOUSY

"Coddie done it," he said. Like a flash the man behind' Coddie brought his gun down on the boy's head and Coddie crumpled and the man, grabbing him by the coat collar, threw him limp and unconscious across his horse. Wheeling the posse rode like mad from its holster.

"Shoot them! Stop them! DO something!" shouted Jeff in a frenzy "Why don't you stop them?"

Somewhere out of the distance came another car and stopped full length across the road. Jeff tried to hold himself up in weakness that almost overcame him, and he shouted, but the echo only fell back upon his ears.

"Jeff!" Helen's voice came to him from a great distance.

With a tremendous effort he opened his eyes and gasped out his story. Cody was to be hung and they had no business hanging him. Cody was a man and he had tried to make a man of HIM—Jeff—and now they wanted to hang him. Cody's brother was to blame. He had admitted that he was the one who had killed the revenue officer. Jeff fell back unconscious. Helen and the Colonel's driver lifted him into the back of the car. "Get help as quickly as you can, Sam," she commanded. "I'll wait here."

As the moments crept by and there was no sign of help from the valley, she knew that if she did not help Cody no one else could. A note from Cody had told her that Jeff, whose sudden disappearance had frightened them all, was in safe hands, and she had determined to risk a trip into the mountains to tell Cody that the Colonel was grieving for both boys. She had arrived at a crucial moment. It was up to her to save Cody, who had saved Jeff.

A crowd in front of the jail and cries of "Lynch him!" told her all well. A black shot up from the shadows of what was happening. The crowd wanted vengeance for the killing of the revenue officer. the forest behind and there were wild shouts—"Forest fire! Those damned mountaineers are trying to burn us out!" "We've got to back-fire that or I'll git the town," someone yelled. "Plenty o' time for the hanging!" And the crowd in wild excitement, broke in a run for the blaze.

Helen slipped around the corner of the jail and came face to face with the sheriff. The man had fished out his gun but he repeated it when he saw the girl and grinned. Girls couldn't do any thing.

"Are you going to let them hang that man?" demanded Helen indignantly. "He's innocent—I know he's innocent. You got to save him."

The man stared at her curiously. "Looks like they're made up their minds they want a necktie party," he drawled. "Don't seem possible to save him."

Furiously she flared at him "You're an officer of the law. . . . Why don't you do something? . . . He's innocent. I know he is. . . . He wouldn't kill any body . . . Don't you hear me!"

He answered her with an ugly smirk "Give me the keys," she demanded. She heard Cody's voice from the inside but she did not heed. "Give me the keys!"

The sheriff did not move and as Helen's anger mounted to an uncontrollable fury she struck at him with her fists. He raised his hands to stop her and before he could get them down again she had whipped his revolver from its holster.

"Now give me the keys."

The sheriff pulled them from his pocket but as he held them out to her he grabbed for the gun with the other hand.

Helen's finger moved on the trigger and the man fell heavily to the ground. She was dazed for a moment but even the thoughts of the possible murder could not take her mind from her task and she picked the keys from the ground and unlocked the door. Coddy stepped out.

"You'll have to hurry," she said with out explanation or questioning. "They'll be back any minute and then it will be too late."

Coddy did not answer her. He stared at the figure of the sheriff sprawled unconsciously on the ground and made no move.

"Hurry!" urged Helen. "We've no time to waste!"

"No," Coddy answered. "I'll wait."

"Come—for my sake," begged Helen frantically. "I've just shot a man to save you and if you refuse to take me away they will."

Coddy looked again at the sheriff who sat heavily, holding his hand to his side.

"All right," he assented and they hurried from the jail to-wards the forest. Like a mad thing the fire was leaping from, tree to tree, crackling,izzling.

With Helen clinging to his hand Coddy made his way forward trying to pick a path through the forest that would lead back to the Colonel's plantation.

Smoke filled their nostrils, sizzling with wood whistled through the air past their ears and the flames舞ed over hungry, tongues at their clothing. They dodged back and forth, finding themselves time and again cut from an outlet by a treacherous span of fire that shot across their paths. Fallen limbs and trunks of trees tripped them and they stumbled forward only to find themselves tricked into lanes where the fire blazed suddenly out of space. For a time Helen met Coddy's pace gamely but the smoke dizzied her and she knew that her strength was going.

"You go—Carter" she said to the boy. "I can't." She hesitated a moment then went on: "I've tried to hate you, but I—I can't. Goodbye." She drew his head down and kissed him. Coddy lifted her then in his arms and carried her, stumbling into a small lake in the center of the burning forest. And there in the reeds beside the shore they waited in the cold water for the forest fire to burn itself out.

Colonel Newland and his son Jeff found them in the morning; but they first came across Zeke. He was blistered so that Jeff at first could not recognize him; and he could not see. When he heard them coming, a wild, crazy burst from him and he laughed.

"You hung Coddy for killing a man I shot; but I'm square, damn you, I'm square! I burned your damn country. Shoot me! I don't care. I'm square," he swayed, stretched his arms upward and fell back dead.

Helen paid no attention to them when they came up: she sat holding Coddy's head in her lap and she was talking to him. "Carter," she whispered. "Don't die—please don't die. I want you to live. Please, Carter, I love you."

He opened his eyes for a moment, smiled up at her and when she bent down to hear what he was saying he kissed her.

"I'm not going to die," he said. "Because I—well, I'd rather live—for you."

He opened his eyes for a moment, smiled up at her and when she bent down to hear what he was saying he kissed her.

"I'm not going to die," he said. "Because I—well, I'd rather live—for you."

How did Helen get her knees so terribly sunburned?

Here and There

Although the Canadian Pacific Railway has yet issued no forecast of construction contemplated for 1924, the fact that it has ordered 50,000 tons of steel from the Algoma Steel Corporation of Sault Ste. Marie, seems to indicate that its program will be extensive.

According to a statement recently made by the Hon. Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines for the Province of Ontario, 85 per cent of the world's nickel supply is being taken out of the Canadian nickeliferous district. It is also stated that Alberta is using an inexhaustible supply of this metal.

Alberta's butter production last year was 18,500,000 pounds, or 2,000,000 pounds more than in 1922, according to reports presented at the meeting of the Alberta Dairymen's Association. It is also stated that so long ago that Alberta was using butter imported from New Zealand.

The year 1923 was a favorable one in the building and construction activities of Canada and returns show an advance of about 10 per cent.

In 1923 the value of exports in this regard were $315,000,000, and in 1922 $345,000,000, an increase of $30,000,000.

Exports of pulpwood from Canada for the year 1923 amounted to 1,384,230 cords, compared with 1,011,482 cords, or an increase of 372,748 cords or 35 per cent. The exports are equivalent to about 900,000 tons of newsprint, the amount which can be manufactured from that amount of wood.

C. E. E. Ussher, General Passenger Traffic Manager, and J. G. Johnson, General Manager and General Passenger Agent, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, have been presented with medals by the French Government in recognition of their services to the French Expedition in Canada in 1921.

Attention has been drawn once more by airship experts in London, England, to the fact that the only hydrogen gas available in the Province of Alberta, that 10,000,000 feet of this gas is going to waste and that the possibility of establishing a hydrogen base at some future date in Alberta is being discussed.

Canada's fisheries production during 1923 is estimated to be drawn once more by airship experts in London, England, to the fact that the only hydrogen gas available in the Province of Alberta, that 10,000,000 feet of this gas is going to waste and that the possibility of establishing a hydrogen base at some future date in Alberta is being discussed.

Official figures recently issued show that the Dominion of Canada is the greatest single contributor to the world's supply of the world. The stands alone in this regard. Her flour exports are far ahead of the palmiest years and are rapidly increasing. The foreign market for Canada's mineral, forest, agricultural and fisheries industries are now valued at $2,420,000,000, or $262,000,000 higher than a year ago.

British immigration during the nine months ended December, totalled 64,272, compared with 28,525 in the corresponding period of the previous year, an increase of 125 per cent. Immigration from the United States was 17,822, compared with 18,200, a decrease of 2 per cent. The total for the nine-month period of 1923 was 124,630, compared with 60,247 in the same period in the previous year, an increase of 107 per cent.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has received from Boerigard, Willis, Faber & Company, 1,520,000 pounds of sterilized for distribution to the officers and crew of the steamship "Empress of Australia" for saving the lives of 1,000 persons during the Japanese earthquake. For the purpose of purchasing a memento to be presented to Captain Samuel Rossouw B.E. R.A.R., the commanding officer of the "Empress of Australia," and now commander of the "Empress of Canada" on her world cruise, 210 pounds sterling have been retained by the Canadian Pacific. Plans are being made to honor the captain when the "Empress of Canada" reaches Yokohama next May, the Japanese government participating in the ceremonies.
